Building a custom home is often a dream endeavor for many people, but it can also be a bit daunting if you've never experienced it before. This is especially true if you're living in a separate city and don't know the area you're buying in very well. At Team Woodall we're aiming to address many common questions that arise during the custom build process in a series of blog post articles. To date we've published five such articles and will continue the series with a new article being set for release each Wednesday until complete. If you'd like to learn more about the custom home building process and the many considerations to investigate when choosing your lot we invite you to start by reading the first article: Pros & Cons of Building a Custom Home in Tucson. We hope you enjoy the series and let us know if you have any questions.
